

NANCY WYNNE TALKS ABOUT A VARIETY OF SOCIAL DOINGS

Members of the School Set to be Entertained and to Entertain During the Christmas Holidays. Other Affairs of Interest

Just about this time of year the debutantes of next season begin to be talked about, and at Christmas time the parties for next year's bachelors are the subject of the day. A new year star to appear on the horizon is Elizabeth Miller, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Miller, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Miller, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Miller.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Miller, her parents have decided to give her a party of 18 guests at the Princeton Triangle Play at the Bellevue-Stratford on Wednesday afternoon, December 22. The guests will be entirely from the school set. The girls in the party, many of whom will be debutantes next year also, will be Katharine Lea, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lea; Katharine Hancock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hancock; Anne Townsend, daughter of Mr. J. Barton Townsend; Hope Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alan D. Wilson; Lorraine Graham, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Edward Eldon Graham; Florence Brinton, daughter of Mr. Binney Brinton; Mary and Elizabeth Packard, the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Packard.

Lorraine Graham will have a card party given to her by her parents on Tuesday afternoon, December 23. The girls at this affair will also be from the school set.

If only the gallant wooers of their ladies would not wear their hearts upon their sleeves so evidently, it would be a relief would it not? Several of us were treated to a lovely little scene at a dance in one of the fashionable hotels quite recently and all because one attractive lad asked a charming girl to trip the light fantastic with him and she sensibly accepted. And why not, for after all he danced very well and the time for dancing only with the man of your heart has long since passed. Only in the dance halls where the girls go with their "gentleman friends" do we hear of such rivalries and jealousies. Among the elite one dances with every man unless there is some well known objection to him. Indeed, if a girl refuses, unless she is not dancing at all, it is almost regarded as an insult.

Well, the poor small girl in question started to dance with Fred before the one who evidently regarded himself as her beloved arrived, and was having a fine time, when "beloved" appeared on the tapis (metaphorically speaking), and to express it mildly, there were words! Before we had time to learn all about it, all three left the sacred precincts and I only hope it ended there, for the poor little girl looked awfully upset and mortified. For my part I would have said "A sad but fair farewell," wouldn't you?

We are all looking forward to the "Journey of Joy" which will come off to-night at the Bellevue-Stratford and which promises to be a great success. The girls and men who take part in this annual little song and dance affair for the benefit of the Northern Home for Friendless Children are exceptionally good for amateurs. I must say, and there is usually a great deal of go to their performances.

To-night the plot is a sort of Morality. In which Grace and Joy and Beauty and various other characters will prance gaily about and the Morality will be largely interspersed with vaudeville, from all I have heard about it. Leon Downing has done the coaching and most of the writing of the score and he deserves credit for it, without doubt.
